

BOMB HURLED INTO STORE, 100 LIVES IN PERIL

Black Hand Had Marked Family of James Abape for Vengeance.

WOULDN'T PAY TRIBUTE

He Has Narrow Escape, as Do 20 Other Families as Blast Tears Wall Apart.

Twenty Italian families, more than one hundred men, women and children, were jarred from their beds and thrown into a panic when a bomb blew out the entire ground floor front of the tenement, No. 235 Trautman street, Williamsburg, early to-day.

The hall was completely wrecked by the explosion, and as the building trembled from the shock the tenants poured into the hallways and down the stairs, and crawled out on the fire-escapes in such panic that many were hurt.

The bomb was undoubtedly intended for the family of Ignazio Abape, who had a remarkable escape. The entire neighborhood was aroused, and the arrival of fire-engines and ambulances added to the panic.

Abape is a prosperous merchant formerly in the milk business. In October he bought the house in which he has his store for $4,000. As soon as the news spread in the Italian quarter he began to receive Black Hand letters.

There were four in all, signed respectively by black hands, bombs, revolvers and skeletons. No names were attached, but the letters, which were turned over to the police to-day, were all in the same hand.

The last letter was received three days ago, and demanded that he go at once to Government and pay over $1,000. None of the letters designated to whom he was expected to give the money, but the last said that "this time had come," and that his "family would be blown up." It threatened no less, and Abape had suspected that the bomb would not be sent to him.

The house at which the bomb was directed is one of several old-fashioned three-story frame tenements. The bomb was either placed against the side or thrown into the hallway. The front of the store was blown in, and windows in the next house were demolished and many in other houses in the vicinity were broken.

Abape, his wife and five children were asleep in the rear when the crash of exploding dynamite aroused them, and a wall came tumbling down almost upon them. All were rendered unconscious by the shock, but it was later found that none was seriously injured. Abape's wife, however, is in a condition that made the shock extremely dangerous to her, and she is still suffering greatly from shock.

Many of the tenants knew of the threat, and some had been made to carry out the threats. Fifteen seconds after the explosion the debris of the tenement was rushing down the stairway into the hall. At the ground floor they were stopped by the debris of the walls of the grocery store, over which they had to climb to get to the street. Their terror was added to by the fact that the walls of the house would tumble on their heads before they could escape.

Return to Rooms.

Policeman McGrath, the first to arrive, sent in a call to the Hamburg Avenue Station for reserve and later for ambulances. When it was seen that many of the tenants had been injured in the general stampede, the police were able to restore order among the frightened tenants, and when it was found that the building was safe they were able to return to their rooms. Though many of the tenants were painfully hurt, they all refused assistance of the ambulance surgeons.

The police could get no clue as to the identity of the perpetrator of the bomb outrage. Abape professed to be ignorant of their identity.

This morning Abape issued a deed to the "Black Hand," boldly proclaiming to his countrymen that he would be treated for them if they came about and he had any means of recognizing them. He said he didn't see how they expected to get any money by blowing up his house, and that he certainly didn't propose to sell it and give them the money. He has a milk route and delivered to his customers to-day, but went heavily armed.

The police of the Hamburg Avenue Station said to-day that they believed the outrage was perpetrated by the same gang which had blown up the house of its supposed members a short time ago. The dead man had a bomb company which acquired a kind of a reputation in the neighborhood for its articles, including four valuable rings. On his arrival here Paymaster Maupin turned the property over to the Paymaster-General.
